Report All Occupational Injuries and Illnesses Immediately

Laws vary from state to state. Your state's law may require you, the employer, to file a complete report of every occupational injury or illness that requires medical treatment beyond first aid. As such, BHHC recommends that this report be submitted within five days after the employer obtains knowledge of the injury.

The law also requires you to authorize initial medical treatment within 24 hours of knowledge that an occupational injury or illness has been sustained or reported, regardless of the legitimacy of the claim. Failure to comply may result in the loss of "medical control" and a significant increase in the potential claim cost.
